02 Are you looking for a benefit card or a spend card?

Benefit cards are credit cards that you have mostly for the benefits the card gives you (credits, lounge access, upgrades, status, bonuses, etc.).

Spend cards are cards where you will put some money on every month because of the bonus points earned in those categories (i.e. groceries, dining out, entertainment, gas, rent, etc).

“The impulse to travel is one of the hopeful symptoms of life.”

04

Consider this...

Are there any hotel
or airline brands
that you are loyal
to?

05

What are the other
travel credit cards
you currently hold?
Can they be used to combine with the new card to earn
even more points?

06

Example: If you hold the Chase Sapphire Preferred card, you can get the Chase Freedom Flex card and transfer the cash back into travel points.

What type of points do you want to earn?

Hotel Loyalty Points = Can be used at certain hotel chains that take those points.

Airline Miles = Can be used at certain airlines that take those miles.

Cruise Points = Can be used with certain cruise lines that take those points.

Transferrable Currency = Points that can be transferred to several different hotels and airlines.

How much of an annual fee are you willing to pay?

Low tier cards = Usually no fee, low benefits

Mid Tier Cards = Low annual fee, mid tier benefits

Top Tier Cards = High annual fee, best travel benefits

If you own a business, would you consider getting a card for your business?

These are quite a few business travel credit cards that have different benefits than their personal counterparts

There are no requirements that you spend the points on business travel.

How much is the current sign up bonus?

- Is the bonus lower, higher, or in line with normal.
- How many points are you looking for?
- How much are your normal monthly expenses minus debt?
- This is to make sure you make the spending that is required to get the bonus without going into debt.
